Stammtisch · A Table That Becomes a Place

Stammtisch — a term used in Alpine cultures to describe the community table, a place reserved for the group — is conceived as an object to inhabit.

Its colour is blue: Fassaner Blau, the distinctive colour of Val di Fassa. A deep, cultural blue that becomes a form of material memory.

Its structure is made of hand-welded iron, enriched with red ceramic “goces”, inspired by those found on Bufon vases. The table becomes a living display surface, an object to be inhabited and experienced.

SCATOLA CORTESE

ALESSANDRO SCIALDONE · Architect · Founder

Alessandro Scialdone is an architect and interior designer. In 2024, he founded Scatola Cortese, a Rome-based studio working in interior architecture and design.

Scatola Cortese was conceived as a space for research and design, where architecture and interior design engage with craftsmanship, art, and contemporary design.

The studio follows each project from the definition of the concept through to the development of interiors and bespoke elements, working closely with artisans, companies, and skilled craftsmen.

Containing with care, building with kindness.

ÙTOL

FLAVIO ROSSI / DAVID ROMELLI · Designers · Founders

ÙTOL is a contemporary ceramics studio founded by Flavio Rossi and David Romelli.

The studio develops objects, small series, and installations that bring together artistic research, design, and visual languages.

ÙTOL's work explores themes of memory, identity, the body, and the social dimension of matter, with a particular focus on the narrative potential of ceramics.

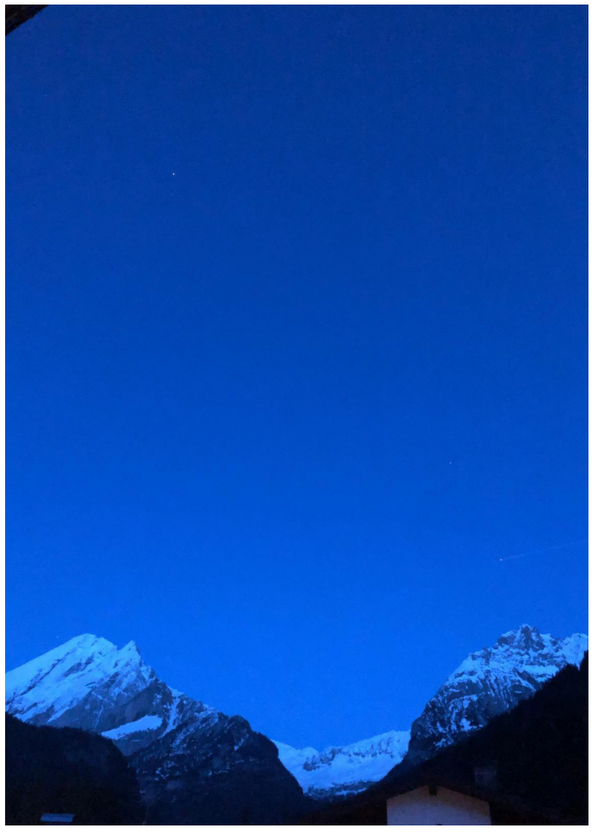

Its practice is distinguished by an experimental approach to form and surface, the use of words as a sculptural element, and a poetic language that intertwines Ladin roots, contemporary visual culture, and handcrafted gestures.

ÙTOL operates between Rome and Val di Fassa.
